RETURNS FROM LONG PROSPECTING TRIP

D. Kennedy, Jr., returned to Juneau on the Alameda last night after an absence of more than a year spent in the interior of the British Yukon and Alaska.

Mr. Kennedy left for an extended prospecting trip in May 1911. He spent the greater part of the summer and all of the succeeding winter on the head waters of the Pelly and over the Mackenzie river slope. It is a big country, Mr. Kennedy says, but he did not find anything that was sufficiently interesting to hold him longer, and when the ice broke in the spring he followed it down. A tributary of the Pelly, known as the Lapie river, has some prospects and a couple of men are working on it, but there are only seven or eight men in the Pelly country.

Mr. Kelly floated down to Circle and then disembarking struck out for the Birch Creek diggings. Here he worked and prospected for two months. This country shows up very good according to Mr. Kennedy, who says he got fairly good prospects.

From Birch Creek he walked to Fairbanks and took a job in a Chatam Creek quartz mine. He says the quartz mines there are nice little stringers, small but very rich.

While working here Dan got word that his parents, who are old pioneers of Juneau, were ill so he headed for the coast. He walked from Fairbanks to Chitina over the summer trail 324 miles in 10 days; and it took him six days to walk the 160 miles from Circle to Fairbanks. During his absence he has traveled over 4,000 miles besides wielding a pick to some purpose.

It is Mr. Kennedy's intention to return to Birch Creek in the Spring.

ELKS' HAD ROYAL TIME

The Elks' big annual smoker last night attracted a large crowd; the hall was comfortably filled by the membership and invited guests. A large delegation from Treadwell and Douglas was in attendance and assisted materially in the amusement features of the entertainment. A special late ferry carried the visitors home after the festivities were over.

There was plenty of good cheer in evidence and liquid refreshments. A splendid program had been arranged by the committee in charge which was carried out with promptness and vim. Jim McCloskey was referee and Billy Garster master of ceremonies.

Monte Snow opened the program with a song "Moonlight Bay," which was rendered in his usual good voice. After the song Franks and Williams, two juvenile glove artists boxed three rounds to a draw in a spirited manner.

Next L. Foreman of Treadwell and Denny Malloy, of Juneau, donned the gloves for three rounds which were fast and furious. Foreman got the decision.

John T. Spickett took the stage and rendered in his splendid voice several old time favorites. Jimmie Chambers, of Treadwell, and Red Kelly, of the New Orpheum circuit, were introduced and gave some classy boxing of three rounds duration. This event was called a draw.

Kenneth Osborne, leader of the high school band, gave a very acceptable trombone solo. Billy Smith, of Treadwell, sang himself into high favor. Herbert Manners, of Treadwell, and Roy Nolan, of Indiana, sparred for three fast rounds, in which the Hoosier had lost the decision.

Jack Wilson, assisted by the audience, sang "We Will All Be With You When You Tackle Paddy Flynn." M. J. O'Brien's protegee, Mr. Patrick Casey, recently from Ireland, gave a glimpse of the old sod by dancing a hornpipe.

Jamison, Guyot, Ferte and Snow sang in quartet and were enthusiastically received. Bill Smith was again called on the stage and sang in good style some of Harry Lauder's favorites.

It now being the proper moment, 11 o'clock, the Elks' rose and sang "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Ferte gave a dialect recital which was thoroughly enjoyed.

Denny Malloy gave a recitation and then Dave Housel, of Treadwell, was introduced. Dave tried to sing and failed; tried to recite and failed again, whereupon the friendly attendants got the hook and lead him from the stage.

Everybody went home declaring it a very pleasant evening and cherishing the hope that the entertainment might be repeated in the near future.
